In early June we worked out with Ed Anderson a test demonstration using Raigro implants on a set of yearling Angus steers. Last Wednesday these cattle were weighed. The response was exciting and I want you to know the results. Remember this was a dry year and these cattle depended on grass for their gain.

There were 6 purebred Angus steers in the test - three were implanted and three were left as checks.

The implanted cattle had a beginning average of 590 pounds and ending weight of 762 pounds. The gain for 153 days were 172 pounds or 1.12 pounds per day.

The check cattle averaged 567 pounds at the start and weighed 687 at the close. This was a 120 pound gain or .78 pounds per day.

The difference was 1.12 - .78 or .34 pounds per day in favor of the Raigro implanted cattle. The total difference is .34 ADG x 153 days = 52 pounds. These cattle are worth 40c per pound, so the Raigro implanted cattle were worth $20.80 more than the checks.

To do this requires a gun that costs about $20.00 and the implants are about 90c each. There are about 6,000 calves born each year in this county. Just think what this one little practice would do for farm income. We have another test demonstration using calves that we'll be reporting on as soon as all the weights are in.

Today the story is simply implant cattle if you are interested in maximum returns from your cattle.

Broadleaf and needle evergreens that are planted in the fall are especially vulnerable to winter damage if dry periods or excessive high winds occur during the winter months. When these conditions occur, excessive transpiration may occur and the foliage dries up. Therefore, it is often nessary to water fall planted shrubs throughout the winter.

Erecting a temporary screen of burlap or a section of snow fence will help to provide a protection against high winds when shrubs are planted in areas that are exposed to high winds.

Mulching fall planted shrubs is also beneficial as this helps to keep the soil moist and provides some protection for the roots from freezing.

Move Over, Loretta Lynn! Nashville Here We Come!

By David Williams

An atmosphere of tension and excitement has been building up around ACHS. The Drama Club is hard at work again in preparation for its Fall production, They'd Hang You In Nashville. This is a hilarious musical comedy about the adventures of two unemployed college graduates. They have to stoop to dancing with old ladies to keep from being thrown out in the street. To top it all, they become involved with a notorious country singer who is wanted by the police.

The cast of the play is a combination of both novice and experienced young actors and actresses. Kurt Greenbaum, Willis Fleshman, Tamara Nash, Darrell Puckett, Molly Handy, Walker Covington, and Bessie Hash play the leading roles. Joyce Sweet provides her able experienced direction with the support of an able behind-the-scenes crew.

Such lines as "that means you're mine little dogie!" prevail throughout the play as Tamara nash, alias "Bobbie Jo Pickens", tries to drive Stan (Kurt Greenbaum) and Bob, (Willis Fleshman), up the wall.

Tickets are available from Drama Club members or Seniors at the prices of $1.00 for adults, in advance, and 50c extra at the door.

Don't be late! They'd Hang You In Nashville begins at 8 p.m. at the ACHS auditorium on November 10 and 11. As one of the character says, "This is a show that any dude who's any dude can get into."
